

After many years of unwanted, annoying interruptive sales calls, I finally have my own phone back again. I can now answer my phone with some expectation that there is someone on the other end that I want to speak to. No more letting the answering machine get it and waiting to see if anyone speaks, if I'm in a location in the house to even hear it. Please leave the NJ law alone. It's the first peace we've had in many, many years. Thank you.
